DEMOCRATS FACE WEEK OF TROUBLE

Revenue Bill and Caucus to Cause Woes to Majority. Adjournment Further Off.

week of trouble confronts the emocrats of the House, following the thexpected developments yesterday hich checked the introduction of the mergency revenue bill. Chief interest centers in the return to Washingon of the President, for Mr. Underwood announces that the revenue bill. At this conference Mr. Inderwood apprised the Administration spokesmen of the violent opposition among the rank and 5e to the sallread freight tax—a scheme which the President informally approved in conversation with Mr. Underwood. The majority leader is said to have taken the position that he did not propose to assume personal responsibility for the bill and risk repudiation by the House Democrats, and he would decline to introduce it without more specific indorsement by the President.

Mr. Underwood's friends say he doesn't intend to be the "goat" in the revenue legislation crisis. Fearing that the opposition Democrats will get beyond control the majority leader will vond control the majority leader will insist that President Wilson assume un-reserved responsibility for the entire emergency revenue scheme—for it is on. Despite the action of the Senate Commerce Committee in lopping from the river and harbor bill more than $18,000,000, the opponents of the bill are not going to drop their attacks upon it. They regard the revised measure as victous, because many of the most ob-jectionable projects are still retained. Senator Burton, who has led the fight against the bill; in a statement said; "The committee and the engineers who have aided them are entitled to credit have aided them are cattled to credit for having sought temporary reduction in appropriations, but their action does not meet the objections of the opponents of the bill. The reductions made do not diminish by more than a few thou-sands the ultimate expense of pending river and harbor improvements.
